Y Sight of Present High School

Since 1724, when it first gained its independence from Dedham, Walpole has continued to grow and prosper as a town. Accompanying this growth has been the development of a wide-ranging educational system. As the town of Walpole prepares to celebrate its 250th anniversary, therefore it is fitting that we commemorate another anniversary that will take place in this same year of 1974, the graduation of the 100th class from Walpole High School. In honor of this occasion, the senior class feels, that it is appropriate that we pause for a few moments in the present, and explore the role education has played in Walpole's past.

In looking back, there are many stories to be told. From its first graduating class of fifteen in 1874, to its present day class of nearly four hundred, Walpole High School has developed and expanded, suffering both additions and relocations. The High School has definitely seen change; change not only in numbers but in dress, hairstyles and speech. Basically, though, the students themselves remain the same. We, the class of '74 may say it in different ways but like our colleagues of the century past, we remain constant to the timeless principles of humanitarianism and peace. Therefore, perhaps we are looking at ourselves more than anything else, as we journey back to see . . . "The Way We Were".

Education — In the Beginning

Today and in the past, the state of Massachusetts has and has always had one of the most extensive educational systems in the country. Home of minute men and rebel causes, Massachusetts is a state with a spectrum of colorful history that no other state in the country can equal. The Bay State has and continues to be one of the most questing states in the nation; a place that is open and ready for change and progress and yet, a place where tradition is honored with a sense of timelessness. These qualities which so illuminate Massachusetts as a state, pervade her educational system. She is constantly searching for new and better ways to teach her children using "a well balanced fly wheel of conservatism"[1] as a moral gauge for change.

From the beginning, the colonists of the Bay State realized that the foundation for a stable and prospering state was an equally stable educational system. In fulfilling this realization, Massachusetts made herself a leader of the nation. In 1635 Bostin Latin School, the first Latin School in America was established in the capitol city. One year later in 1936 the Bay State became the founder of another first, Harvard College, the first college in the nation. These were small beginnings; both were private institutions supported by non-public funds or endowments, both were "chauvenistically" all male and because of high tuition fees, education in both institutions was limited to the wealthy.

On January 1st 1644, a major educational breakthrough was made in the town of Dedham, of which Walpole was at the time a part. On that day the town council voted the appropriation of funds to make possible the first free public school in the country. The school was supported wholly by taxation and the banishment of tuition made it possible for all able towns children to receive the benefits of an education. During the first few years of its existence, the school was taught by Ralph Wheelock, a graduate of Cambridge University, England. Classes were probably held either in his home or the town meeting house. The pupils consisted of 12 girls and 18 boys ranging from 5 to 15 years of age. Later, in 1648, the town voted to build the schoolhouse portrayed on the opposite page. It was 18 feet long and 15 feet wide, with two windows. Another small start, but a beginning had been made. Thus, not only the state of Massachusetts, but the town of Walpole, helped to lay the structural groundwork for what would soon become the educational system throughout the United States.

Education in Walpole

Joshua Stetson, Jr.
Prominent manufacturer; Town Clerk from 1831 to 1845; member of the School Board for years, and in 1836, 1837, and 1838 our Representative in General Court.

Walpole first gained her independence from Dedham in the year 1724. From that time, the small population was on her own, expected by the general court of Dedham to fulfill the requirements of Independent Township, one of which was the establishment and maintenance of public schools for the education of the town's children.

During those first thirty years of Walpole's township, she was busy "growing up" in many ways. Although the need for educational facilities was recognized little progress was made in this field. The first indications of any sort of a "legal" school appear in the town records in the year 1732 when the town council voted the appropriation of "30 lbs." for the "instruction of small children in the summertime". The school was held on what was then known as Esie Plain and was taught by Samuel Kingsbury. In 1739 it was suggested that three school-houses be built in appropriate sections of the town; however, this proposition was dropped because of lack of funds.

Walpole obtained her first school-house sometime between 1750-57, through the combined efforts of Rev. Philips Payson and Deacon Eziekiel Robbins. It was located on what is now the west side of the common and was later relocated at the corner of West and New Station Streets.

Schooling in those days was quite different from today. A typical student's day consisted of alphabet and Bible Studies in the morning. During that time students would be asked to recite several verses of the Bible that they had memorized, to the schoolmaster. In the afternoon multiplication tables were memorized and recited. Books were scarce and had to be shared; sometimes one book had to serve nine or ten children.

If the concept of education was different, the students themselves were not. This seems borne out by an amusing account related by James Hartshorn. One day it was necessary for a young man to travel from his home to school to have his brother dismissed. Since "hot rods" were still a dream of the future, the boy mounted his horse and galloped off. When he arrived at the school he trotted up to the door, and without a second thought, guided his horse through the door . . . right up to the teacher's desk. The record doesn't go into much detail but the lesson is clear: Horseplay doesn't have to be included in the curriculum at any age; it is both timeless and instinctive.

Education in Walpole continued to expand. By 1763 there were reading and writing schools in four parts of Walpole. (Mention is also made of some sort of Women's School within the town.) In 1776 a school was established in the east end of town. Up to this time the schools in Walpole were controlled specifically by the town's selectmen. In 1826, however, Walpole passed another landmark in her educational system with the election of her first school committee. The original members of this committee helped to define the standards which Walpole has continued to use as guidelines in the development of her educational system.

Warren Colburn, Walpole resident and school teacher.

The differences in past and present educational concepts are clearly illustrated with this early school book. Unlike today when education has a purely academic viewpoint, past education concerned itself with both learning and moral background for students.

School Buildings Reflect Progress In Education

Since the days of the Old Village School, Walpole has seen many changes and improvements in the school system. The schools have witnessed the progress from horse and buggy to buses, from hickory benches to portable desks, and from parchment to microfilm. The buildings themselves have progressed over the years, reflecting the progress of education in general.

In the early and middle nineteenth century, high school classes were held in homes of various "Schoolmarms" and "Schoolmasters". High school students, including what are now considered to be junior high school grades — seven and eight — were then educated in various other town buildings, including the present Town Hall, until 1898, when the Old Village School on School Street was remodeled to be used for a high school. Classes were held there for ten years at which time the present high school was build in 1908. Overcrowding made additions necessary in 1928 and again in 1955. Therefore, as the needs of the town changed and developed, the high school was also changed to satisfy these needs.

Progress was reflected in Walpole's elementary schools as well as in the high school. While one schoolhouse was originally sufficient for grades 1-12, by 1900 several others had been constructed in order to better serve the town. As people moved to different sections of Walpole, it necessitated the building of both the Old South Walpole Schoolhouse and the Old North Walpole Schoolhouse in the 1850's. The schoolhouse in East Walpole between Allen's corner and Plimpton Farm was remodelled and the Old Stone Schoolhouse was built in 1885. After the turn of the century, today's existing schoolhouses were constructed: Old Fisher in 1913, Plimpton in 1914, Old Bird in 1920, Boyden in 1930, New Stone in 1950, and New Fisher in 1955. All of these buildings reflected progress as they were designed to meet the needs of Walpole's youth in the particular period of time they represented.

There have been countless changes in the school system in this past century. Among them have been curriculum changes, alternate teaching methods, and new audio-visual materials. But it was the buildings themselves that provided students with a concrete representation of the progress, innovations, and improvements of the past one hundred years since the first graduating class to represent Walpole stepped out of the Old Village School.

A CENTURY of Wars

In this past century, four major wars have erupted, inspiring diverse reactions from sincere patriotism to defiant hostility.

In 1917, the United States entered into the first World War. In answer to President Wilson's pledge to make the world "safe for democracy" as well as to Uncle Sam's famous plea, "I want you!," several thousand young men enthusiastically enlisted, among them three hundred and seven from Walpole. These men were not forgotten at war — their families and friends rallied continuously for their support. The Walpole War Fund Association raised $34,629.33 for the Red Cross while the women of the Walpole Service Company were busy creating "comfort kits" and knitting socks and sweaters for the young servicemen of whom they were so proud.

On November 11, 1918, the signing of the Armistice was announced in Walpole at four o'clock in the morning via the blowing of horns and the ringing of bells. Headed by the Walpole High School students, war songs were sung and a victory parade of 115 cars was held. An official welcoming committee of twenty-five men and women was chosen, although hundreds turned out to cheer home "their boys." Parades, banquets, and countless other festivities were held in honor of these boys, a vivid indication of the incredible patriotism and faith in the United States which was so prevalent at this time.

With the arrival of the next war, World War II, attitudes seemed to have changed a great deal. Enlistment was neither as enthusiastic nor as spontaneous as it had been in the preceding war. However, the faith of the families was ever-prevalent, as was the respect accorded the returning veterans. Upon the news of victory over Japan, a "V-J" holiday was held in Walpole center, highlighted by a "Horribles" parade, in which people were costumed and servicemen were honored. However, in the midst of this jubilation, the vivid memories of depression lingered, and the threat of recession was in the air. The strong patriotism of the early 1900's seemed to be infiltrated with a vague sense of confusion and uncertainty.

As a result of these sentiments which continued to mount throughout the period, the announcement of the Korean War was met with astonishingly less enthusiasm, even a sense of apathy and frustration. Servicemen questioned their role in Middle East difficulties and resented, rather than respected, the deaths of their comrades. Nothing outside of newspaper headlines commemorated the end of the war, and the vast change in sentiments was becoming increasingly evident.

At the onset of the Vietnam War, attitudes had come full circle since the days of "Fighting for Home and Country." Young men resented the fact that they must fight in a war without direct bearing on the United States. Draft cards were burned, draft dodgers were imprisoned, draft boards were busy. In October, 1969, several Walpole students either participated in the national moratorium day for peace or organized their own demonstrations against the war. Deaths of servicemen were deemed "senseless," and the news of the cease-fire in 1973 was met with a mixture of relief and cynicism, rather than jubilation. Walpole students and other citizens reacted in the same manner as people all over the country: with hostility and resentment.

In general, the attitudes of the townspeople reflected the prevalent attitudes of the country: World War I inspired faithful patriotism; World War II, less enthusiasm and confusion; the Korean War, apathy and frustration; and the War in Vietnam, hostility and resentment. War, therefore, has been highly influential in the lives of Walpole's students and, indeed, all of her citizens. The lessons of the past seem to hold out little real hope for peace with or without honor, in the future.

Walpole High School Today and Tomorrow

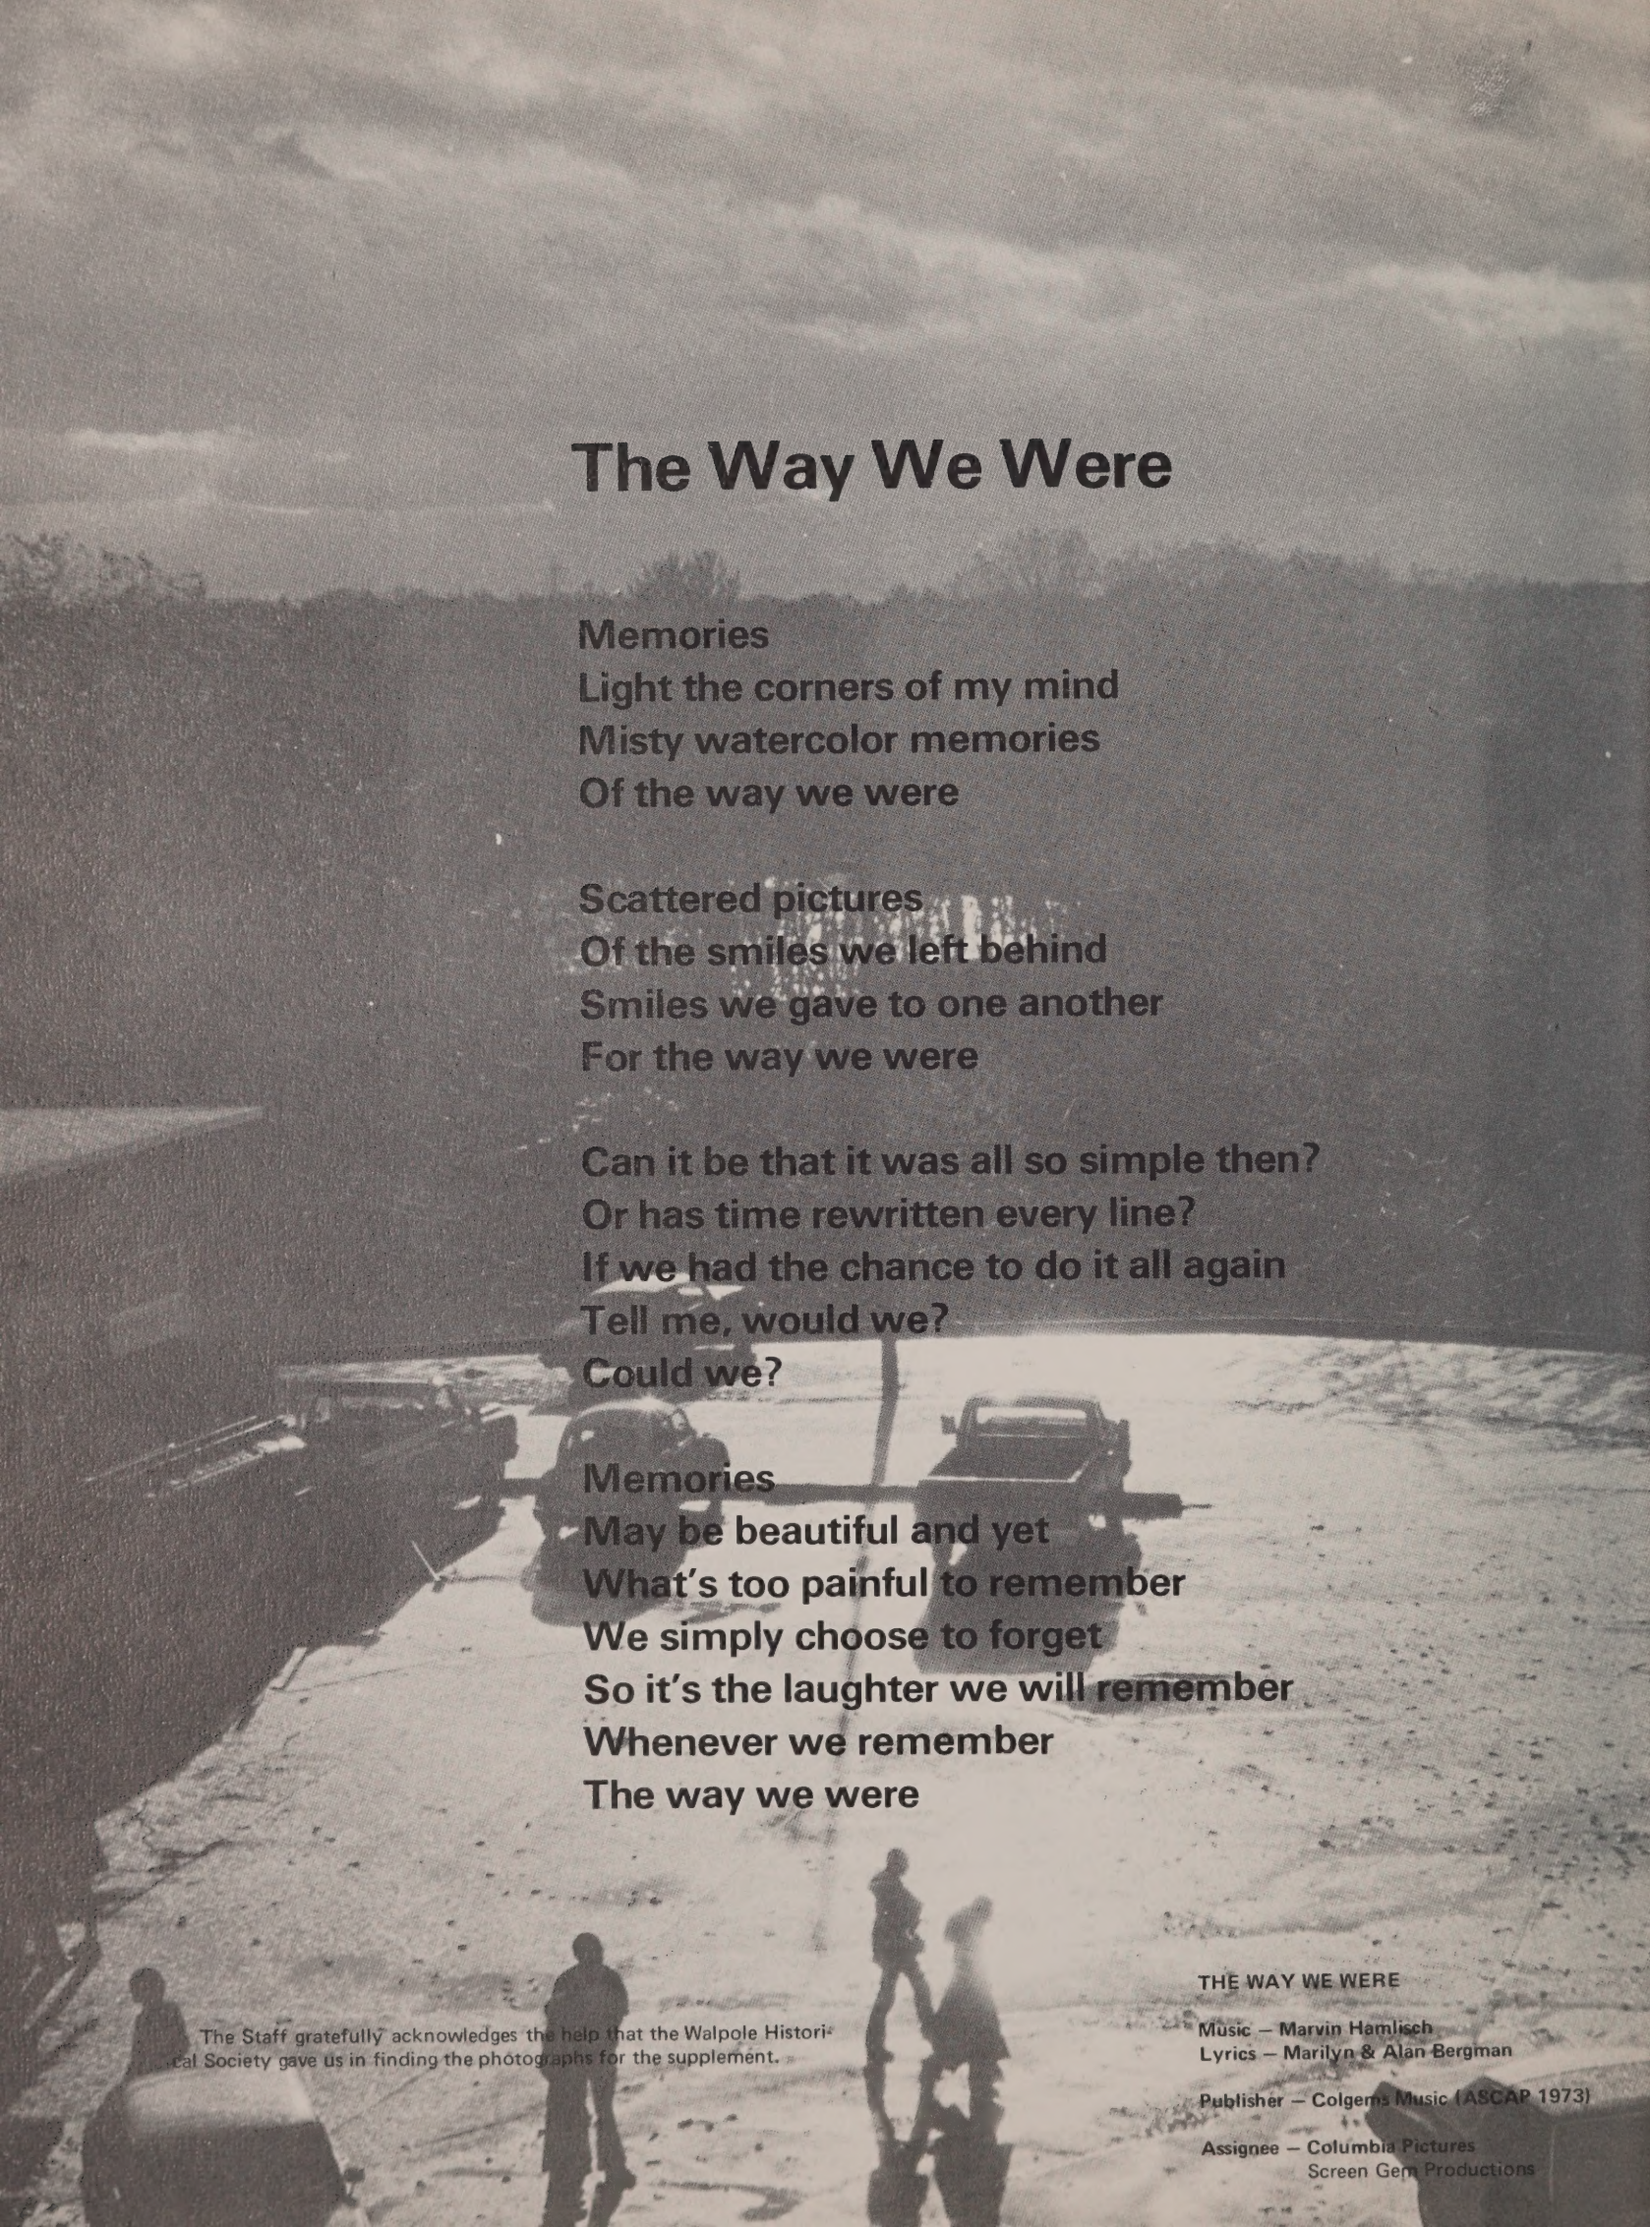
In retrospect Walpole High School has been reshaped and reformed in accordance with many outside influences and changes. Again today, the high school must be reshaped in order to deal with the most pressing problem of overcrowding and the possible resulting loss of accreditation.

In 1971 and again in 1972, the Walpole Town Meeting Representatives voted down both a new high school and an addition-renovation policy. The inevitable problem of higher taxes was of utmost concern, as well as the problem of locating a suitable site. However, this decision, along with the continually growing high school population, had brought about another related problem: possible loss of accreditation. Because of existing conditions, the high school was up for re-accreditation every year rather than the customary five. Walpole did receive accreditation in 1973, but without positive action to alleviate the space problem, the possibility of the loss of it in 1974 was a strong reality.

Positive steps are being taken, however, thanks to the efforts of the new Superintendent Dr. John T. MacDonald. In October, 1973, the architectural firm of Russell, Gibson, and Von Donlen was selected to draw up several alternate solutions for increasing space, including a new building or an addition-renovation of the existing one. In November, 1973, a town meeting appropriated $50,000 for this purpose. The firm has already presented figures to Walpole officials at a cost of $10.5 million for a new building and $8.7 this first for an addition.

Once again the town of Walpole is faced with the necessity of reshaping the high school in order to better comply with the changes within the town.

In general, these past one hundred years have seen many changes in both the school system and the students it services. There has been war and peace, acceptance and rebellion, construction and renovation. And now, as we look to the future and what it may hold for the town of Walpole and its one hundredth graduating class, we may be assured that what we will be is just as important as the way we were.



The Way We Were

Memories
Light the corners of my mind
Misty watercolor memories
Of the way we were

Scattered pictures
Of the smiles we left behind
Smiles we gave to one another
For the way we were

Can it be that it was all so simple then?
Or has time rewritten every line?
If we had the chance to do it all again
Tell me, would we?
Could we?

Memories
May be beautiful and yet
What's too painful to remember
We simply choose to forget
So it's the laughter we will remember
Whenever we remember
The way we were

For those who did not know Ricky, it is hard for us who knew him to explain what kind of person he was without being biased. He had many friends: teachers and parents as well as students. He was always smiling. Always ready to help whenever he was needed. He was active in school sports: football, weightlifting, and wrestling. His spirit and enthusiasm infected all around him.

Though Ricky's life ended in tragedy, his memory lives on in the hearts of all who knew him.

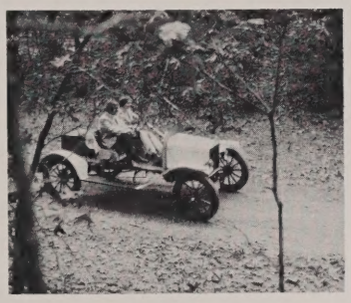
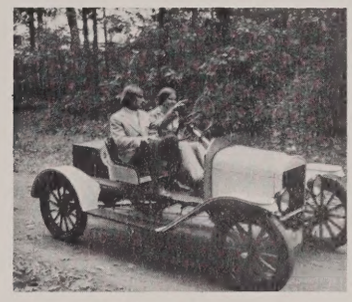
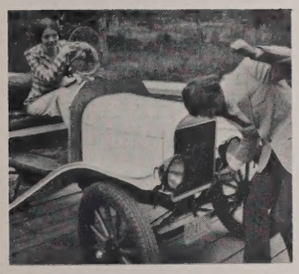
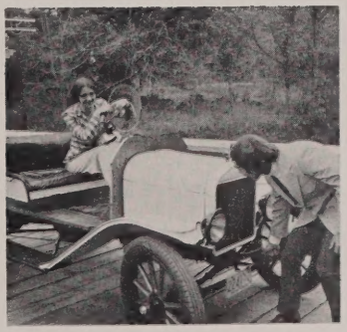
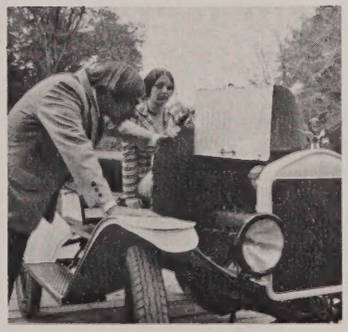
And as we behold new worlds, we shall be able to capture the wonder of it all in the magic Eastman box known as the "camera." How the marvel of these two products of man's genius amazes us!











As the 100th graduating class of Walpole High School steps over the threshold to go out into a no less organized and demanding world than the one it left, it seems appropriate that the Town of Walpole itself steps across its own historic threshold.

It marks its own 250th anniversary and as it passes that milestone it leaves behind the memories of virgin lands and unpolluted rivers. It faces a burgeoning population, repurcussions of Watergate, Africa dying of starvation, and higher taxes.

But perhaps the monument that it builds to mark both the 100th graduating class and the 250th year of livelihood is a most appropriate one: a long needed face lifting and expansion of a tired and senile high school.

Though we, the Class of '74 will never have opportunity to enjoy the new building as students, we're glad that those who follow us will.

So then as we reminisce over the past 100 years and dream of the way we were, we look forward to our world, and dream a dream of what we may yet become.

In 1739 it was suggested that three school-houses be built in appropriate sections of the town; however, this proposition was dropped because of lack of funds.

Walpole obtained her first school-house sometime between 1750-57, through the combined efforts of Rev. Philips Payson and Deacon Eziekiel Robbins. It was located on what is now the west side of the common and was later relocated at the corner of West and New Station Streets.

Schooling in those days was quite different from today. A typical student's day consisted of alphabet and Bible Studies in the morning. During that time students would be asked to recite several verses of the Bible that they had memorized, to the schoolmaster. In the afternoon multiplication tables were memorized and recited. Books were scarce and had to be shared; sometimes one book had to serve nine or ten children.

If the concept of education was different, the students themselves were not. This seems borne out by an amusing account related by James Hartshorn. One day it was necessary for a young man to travel from his home to school to have his brother dismissed. Since "hot rods" were still a dream of the future, the boy mounted his horse and galloped off. When he arrived at the school he trotted up to the door, and without a second thought, guided his horse through the door . . . right up to the teacher's desk. The record doesn't go into much detail but the lesson is clear: Horseplay doesn't have to be included in the curriculum at any age; it is both timeless and instinctive.

Education in Walpole continued to expand. By 1763 there were reading and writing schools in four parts of Walpole. (Mention is also made of some sort of Women's School within the town.) In 1776 a school was established in the east end of town. Up to this time the schools in Walpole were controlled specifically by the town's selectmen. In 1826, however, Walpole passed another landmark in her educational system with the election of her first school committee. The original members of this committee helped to define the standards which Walpole has continued to use as guidelines in the development of her educational system.

The differences in past and present educational concepts are clearly illustrated with this early school book. Unlike today when education has a purely academic viewpoint, past education concerned itself with both learning and moral background for students.

School Buildings Reflect Progress In Education

Since the days of the Old Village School, Walpole has seen many changes and improvements in the school system. The schools have witnessed the progress from horse and buggy to buses, from hickory benches to portable desks, and from parchment to microfilm. The buildings themselves have progressed over the years, reflecting the progress of education in general.

In the early and middle nineteenth century, high school classes were held in homes of various "Schoolmarms" and "Schoolmasters". High school students, including what are now considered to be junior high school grades — seven and eight — were then educated in various other town buildings, including the present Town Hall, until 1898, when the Old Village School on School Street was remodeled to be used for a high school. Classes were held there for ten years at which time the present high school was build in 1908. Overcrowding made additions necessary in 1928 and again in 1955. Therefore, as the needs of the town changed and developed, the high school was also changed to satisfy these needs.

Progress was reflected in Walpole's elementary schools as well as in the high school. While one schoolhouse was originally sufficient for grades 1-12, by 1900 several others had been constructed in order to better serve the town. As people moved to different sections of Walpole, it necessitated the building of both the Old South Walpole Schoolhouse and the Old North Walpole Schoolhouse in the 1850's. The schoolhouse in East Walpole between Allen's corner and Plimpton Farm was remodelled and the Old Stone Schoolhouse was built in 1885. After the turn of the century, today's existing schoolhouses were constructed: Old Fisher in 1913, Plimpton in 1914, Old Bird in 1920, Boyden in 1930, New Stone in 1950, and New Fisher in 1955. All of these buildings reflected progress as they were designed to meet the needs of Walpole's youth in the particular period of time they represented.

There have been countless changes in the school system in this past century. Among them have been curriculum changes, alternate teaching methods, and new audio-visual materials. But it was the buildings themselves that provided students with a concrete representation of the progress, innovations, and improvements of the past one hundred years since the first graduating class to represent Walpole stepped out of the Old Village School.

A CENTURY of Wars

In this past century, four major wars have erupted, inspiring diverse reactions from sincere patriotism to defiant hostility.

In 1917, the United States entered into the first World War. In answer to President Wilson's pledge to make the world "safe for democracy" as well as to Uncle Sam's famous plea, "I want you!," several thousand young men enthusiastically enlisted, among them three hundred and seven from Walpole. These men were not forgotten at war — their families and friends rallied continuously for their support. The Walpole War Fund Association raised $34,629.33 for the Red Cross while the women of the Walpole Service Company were busy creating "comfort kits" and knitting socks and sweaters for the young servicemen of whom they were so proud.

On November 11, 1918, the signing of the Armistice was announced in Walpole at four o'clock in the morning via the blowing of horns and the ringing of bells. Headed by the Walpole High School students, war songs were sung and a victory parade of 115 cars was held. An official welcoming committee of twenty-five men and women was chosen, although hundreds turned out to cheer home "their boys." Parades, banquets, and countless other festivities were held in honor of these boys, a vivid indication of the incredible patriotism and faith in the United States which was so prevalent at this time.

With the arrival of the next war, World War II, attitudes seemed to have changed a great deal. Enlistment was neither as enthusiastic nor as spontaneous as it had been in the preceding war. However, the faith of the families was ever-prevalent, as was the respect accorded the returning veterans. Upon the news of victory over Japan, a "V-J" holiday was held in Walpole center, highlighted by a "Horribles" parade, in which people were costumed and servicemen were honored. However, in the midst of this jubilation, the vivid memories of depression lingered, and the threat of recession was in the air. The strong patriotism of the early 1900's seemed to be infiltrated with a vague sense of confusion and uncertainty.

As a result of these sentiments which continued to mount throughout the period, the announcement of the Korean War was met with astonishingly less enthusiasm, even a sense of apathy and frustration. Servicemen questioned their role in Middle East difficulties and resented, rather than respected, the deaths of their comrades. Nothing outside of newspaper headlines commemorated the end of the war, and the vast change in sentiments was becoming increasingly evident.

At the onset of the Vietnam War, attitudes had come full circle since the days of "Fighting for Home and Country." Young men resented the fact that they must fight in a war without direct bearing on the United States. Draft cards were burned, draft dodgers were imprisoned, draft boards were busy. In October, 1969, several Walpole students either participated in the national moratorium day for peace or organized their own demonstrations against the war. Deaths of servicemen were deemed "senseless," and the news of the cease-fire in 1973 was met with a mixture of relief and cynicism, rather than jubilation. Walpole students and other citizens reacted in the same manner as people all over the country: with hostility and resentment.

In general, the attitudes of the townspeople reflected the prevalent attitudes of the country: World War I inspired faithful patriotism; World War II, less enthusiasm and confusion; the Korean War, apathy and frustration; and the War in Vietnam, hostility and resentment. War, therefore, has been highly influential in the lives of Walpole's students and, indeed, all of her citizens. The lessons of the past seem to hold out little real hope for peace with or without honor, in the future.

First floor plan of the new proposed high school

Walpole High School Today and Tomorrow

In retrospect Walpole High School has been reshaped and reformed in accordance with many outside influences and changes. Again today, the high school must be reshaped in order to deal with the most pressing problem of overcrowding and the possible resulting loss of accreditation.

In 1971 and again in 1972, the Walpole Town Meeting Representatives voted down both a new high school and an addition-renovation policy. The inevitable problem of higher taxes was of utmost concern, as well as the problem of locating a suitable site. However, this decision, along with the continually growing high school population, had brought about another related problem: possible loss of accreditation. Because of existing conditions, the high school was up for re-accreditation every year rather than the customary five. Walpole did receive accreditation in 1973, but without positive action to alleviate the space problem, the possibility of the loss of it in 1974 was a strong reality.

Positive steps are being taken, however, thanks to the efforts of the new Superintendent Dr. John T. MacDonald. In October, 1973, the architectural firm of Russell, Gibson, and Von Donlen was selected to draw up several alternate solutions for increasing space, including a new building or an addition-renovation of the existing one. In November, 1973, a town meeting appropriated $50,000 for this purpose. The firm has already presented figures to Walpole officials at a cost of $10.5 million for a new building and $8.7 this first for an addition.

Once again the town of Walpole is faced with the necessity of reshaping the high school in order to better comply with the changes within the town.

In general, these past one hundred years have seen many changes in both the school system and the students it services. There has been war and peace, acceptance and rebellion, construction and renovation. And now, as we look to the future and what it may hold for the town of Walpole and its one hundredth graduating class, we may be assured that what we will be is just as important as the way we were.

Memories
Light the corners of my mind
Misty watercolor memories
Of the way we were

Scattered pictures
Of the smiles we left behind
Smiles we gave to one another
For the way we were

Can it be that it was all so simple then?
Or has time rewritten every line?
If we had the chance to do it all again
Tell me, would we?
Could we?

Memories
May be beautiful and yet
What's too painful to remember
We simply choose to forget
So it's the laughter we will remember
Whenever we remember

Innovative Programs Maintain High Standards In English Dept.

Mr. Arthur Hull
Chairman

In the April Reader's Digest ('74) Vance Packard asked the question, "Are We Becoming a Nation of Illiterates?" That question was prompted by Peter Doe, a recent high school graduate who is suing the San Francisco Unified School District for half a million dollars because "it awarded him a high school diploma even though he was barely literate."

Of the seven reasons the author gave for this illiteracy one especially seemed all too obvious: A revolt against rules and established ways particularly in a scorn for the "mechanics" of writing in favor of the loose, subjective writing of "A Look at a Leaf in Autumn." The 1972 Council for Basic Education concluded that permissiveness "holds sway in the teaching of English today."

What is an apalling trend nationwide is not the trend in the Walpole High English Department. The emphasis in Writing I and II have exposed all students to a rigorous, sequential, demanding program that will place our students on a competitive standing with any other students across the nation.

Along with our writing program, electives in literature are being constantly revised and up-dated to insure students that they are receiving a well-balanced and all-inclusive exposure to the best in our cultural heritage.

Social Studies In The '70's

One hundred years have passed since the first graduating class took social studies, in the 1870's. Since then history courses have changed and developed into studies that are more relevant to the times. We have evolved from a George Washington history to the history of the people who make up America's culture.

We have learned the prejudices and mistakes of our people and government. We have learned about the various aspects of our culture including religion, national heritages, and arts.

In social studies we've made contact with most of the people who made up our country, and we have even centered on ourselves, as individuals and inhabitants of Walpole.

This year a new course has made its way within the itinerary of the social studies courses. The course, "Walpole I" and "Walpole II", has enlightened students as to their heritage. It deals in our town's make-up and its inhabitants. We know Walpole's first industries and its problems in becoming a recognized town.

Yes, like almost everything else, social studies undergoes gradual changes and only after a period of years do we realize exactly how much.

Science Courses Use Innovative Programming

A reward is being offered for the recovery of seven chemistry students, three biology students and one science teacher. They were last seen roaming the corridors of section B muttering to themselves and looking for their science classes. One student was overheard talking to his locker and saying, "Monday I have class during period 2 in room 222, but Tuesday I have to go to room 215 for period 2. Wait a minute, that's Wednesday; Tuesday I'm in 215 for period 1 . . . or is that Thursday. No, Thursday we have class in room 113 during period 1. Friday ? . . . I think I'll stay home Friday and put my head together.

Despite the problems of switching classrooms and changing the sequence of periods, the science program has managed to function in a reasonably successful manner. There have even been some changes and additions within the science curriculum.

The "team biology" courses, taught by Mr. Cinto, Ms. Wrede, Mr. Higgins, Mr. Wakeford and Mrs. Wakeford, have changed from a quarterly to a half-year system. Individualized, programmed instruction has been introduced into approximately half of the chemistry classes under the direction of Mrs. Powers and Mr. Preston.

Mr. Cinto and Miss Claerbout have really had things "popping" in the physiology course. The oceanography course, introduced by Mr. Wakeford and Mr. Brown, has offered a new and different facet to the science curriculum.

Language Dept. Takes

The Foreign Language Department has diversified its curriculum this year with the addition of a new course, "Romanticism and the Contemporary Scene," each a one semester course. These courses trace the literary trends of the times in French, Spanish and German literatures of the 19th and 20th century. Mr. Watson, Spanish teacher, has developed an excellent curriculum format which promises increased enrollment for 1974-75.

Spanish Club members worked since late last spring to raise funds which totaled over $5,000 for their trip to Spain during the April vacation. The fifty students and chaperones led by El Jefe, Mr. Paglari, centered their visits in New Castile visiting Avila, Cuenca, Segovia, Toledo and Madrid. Mr. Paglari is quite excited about the new mini course in Italian started this second semester and a new course in Spanish for the business students to be inaugurated in September, 1974.

Mr. Stoltze's German classes moved along in true teutonic style and the kids are amazed with his genius with AV equipment and his deep resounding voice on tapes singing out pattern drills while across the hall (over the Alps) all doors are closed because of the Castillian rendering of voices from Mr. MacGregor's Spanish class. Miss Cole and Miss Miller continue in their ever-to-excel traditions. Letters pour in continually from alumnae in colleges thanking the ladies for their superb background "a la francaise."

Mrs. Calf (formerly Miss Schneider) continued to dominate the Roman Empire with J. Caesar but her fascination has been detoured by a Don Quixote de La Mancha as she has added Spanish to her teaching assignments. First year drills from Room 120 now get authentic oral responses from across the hall in Room 119 where Miss Kahrilas is handling second year classes. Now talk about organization! The choral unison responses aren't bad either.

To summarize, the Foreign Language Department continues its oral/aural instruction with cultural notations which prepare our students well and leave then richly rewarded culturally and aesthetically after a three or four year sequence. Keep up the good work, maestros!

The school year has been quite productive in a number of ways. Thirty-four students participated in the Business Department's Cooperative Office Experience Program, an increase of seven students over last year. Approximately ten business firms participated in the program.

This year the electricity program, which is the newest in the Industrial Arts Department, expanded to two basic electricity sections and initiated an electronics course.

The programs taught the students the mysteries of electricity such as: how to get electricity from a potato, or how to wire three-way switches, all done with a minimum of blown fuses and sparks and flashes. The new electronics course had students building projects such as radios, electronic sirens, miniature motors and meters. The metal shop, on the other hand, is the oldest shop course in the school, and some of the tools and machines are still around to prove it. It includes such areas as sheet metal, forging, heat treating, foundry, welding, wrought metal, and metal lathe.

Although there is still a lot to be desired in the way of equipment, the metal shop still continues to produce many quality items.

Quality Crafts Despite Ancient Tools

Total Program For The Renaissance Man

The Art Department has a multi-pronged set of goals and has been successful in their achievement. Among the many, three are perhaps the most obvious.

First, is the aim to reach as many students as possible with some actual process in the arts. Our reason for this is to prove that students are creative beings and can be successful in two ways. One, by exploring the creative process as a way to self-identity and secondly, by actually working at art products to discover hidden abilities.

The second goal is to encourage students to make the school environment more stimulating visually. Part of this ongoing program is the murals students have conceived and painted throughout the building.

The final goal is the many awards students have won for their art work in state and national exhibits. Related to this is a citation for excellence in art awarded to Walpole High School by the National Scholastic Art Awards Committee.

Cooperation is a key factor in this jewelry making effort.

It really did seem this year that everytime you looked up the Music Department was involved in a performance or going somewhere. From concerts to competitions; from exchanges to football games; from festivals to parades; from raffles to the world record Monopoly Marathon; using Concert Band, Wind Ensembles, small and large Choruses, the Stage Band and even a Music Theory Class, the Music Department was part of over 40 performances at churches, schools, clubs, dinners, dances, retirements, political rallies, 250th celebrations and on and on. How can we forget the new uniforms, the original music by our own Mr. Mills, the sold out concerts and the very apparent musical growth. Not only did the department perform frequently but gained high ratings in competition. It can be said it was a "good" year for Walpole High's music department.

This year, the Home Economic Department fulfilled its goals to promote a satisfactory sense of self and to enrich personal maturity by developing knowledge in the areas of interpersonal relationships, and personal resources, such as the use of time and money, and maintenance of a home.

The department is rapidly expanding because of many innovations and various activities offered. Several guest lecturers came to speak to students. Among them were: a fashion coordinator, representatives from Alcoholics Anonymous, Medfield State Hospital, Planned Parenthood, prisons and insurance agencies. Field trips were also planned.

Students were impressed by the Simplicity Fashion Show, intrigued by unit pricing at local supermarkets, awed by "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest", and informed by the staff of a local mental hospital. MEDIA BUGGED BY MISSING TAPES

In days gone by, when a library was a library, the overseer of the tomes had relatively simple frustrations: a misplaced book, an overdue fine, a page ripped out of the yearbook. Now all that simplicity is gone because the library is no longer simply a library – it is a media center.

Now the headaches are more varied and complex. Instead of missing books it is missing cards and adapters. Instead of a missing table of contents the problem for media becomes the missing contests of tables. Who took the casette tape recorder? Who signed out for the super eight projector? I could have sworn I gave that Konica to Mrs. Kelleher. It's enough to keep the whole staff reeling.

But despite the furor, the franzied pace, the missing tapes and the bugged staff – projectors do arrive, films do get shown, and the staff does survive – barely.

The Pontiac Six is scoring the most spectacular first year success ever recorded in automotive history—because it meets the driving conditions of today like no other car in the world at its price.

Without an excess ounce of bulk—without an unnecessary inch in length, it is ideally suited to the congested highways of today. Having the largest engine of any six costing less than $1,000, it flashes swiftly through congested traffic; and so sturdily is it constructed that it can be held at top speed for as many continuous hours as the driver likes.

Yet despite its highly desirable external compactness, the Pontiac Six is a supremely comfortable car. Step into the Pontiac Six Sedan. Note its roominess. Mark well the wide, inviting seats and ample leg room.

Then remember, that with all its luxurious provisions for comfort, the Pontiac Six turns in a 38 foot circle—and that it can be quickly and easily parked in places too small for other cars of equal passenger capacity.

Oakland Six. Comparison to Pontiac Six—$1023 to $1295. All prices at factory. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

Mrs. Hayman kept the wheels spinning during the activities block this past year with a variety of activities. There was chess, automotive repairs, ping pong, or just lounging around in an extended coffee break.

The biggest drawing cards, however, were the rock groups that packed out the gym; the boys' football team versus the girls' field hockey team in a field hockey game that ended in a tie score (2-2); and a pie eating contest that left the contestants with blueberries up to their ears.

On the more academic level was the current events contest that pitted teams within the social studies department against each other. The champions: Greener's Greats.

Literary Merry-Go-Round

Believe it or not, all three high school publications, the newspaper, the creative writing magazine, and the yearbook, plus the photography club were headed by an ambitious Mr. Schnorbus. The newspaper took on a new policy of publishing once a month. The staff itself doubled in size thus increasing the content of the paper. The journalism staff also took on the basic duties of the yearbook and with the help of a few outsiders the deadlines were miraculously met. The creative writing magazine was published twice during the year, once in the winter and once in the spring. Supplying all these journals with pictures, was the forever-busy photography club. They were always with a camera or "locked" in the back of 204. Mr. Schnorbus made it through the year without too many headaches and from last report plans on keeping his "jeopardy" on all the publications next year.

Paper Mates Salvage

Too few people are aware of the tons of paper wasted each year. For that reason the Ecology Club has made every effort to make students and teachers alike conscious of how to conserve and recycle used paper. To encourage both, boxes have been placed in classrooms marked "Re-usable" and "Recycable." The former is paper with a good usable side; the latter is paper packaged and sent off

Other projects planned to make the school population ecology conscious are the "Clean-up Day" held on Friday, April 26 from 12:30 to 3:00 p.m. and an "Ecology Booth" to help Walpole take a hard look at the local scene 250 years after its founding as well as 100 years into its future.

For This Club It's Business As Usual

Though the gavel marking the first official Business Club meeting never fell until November, the girls made up for lost time in the next seven months. Invited guest speakers from Burdette and Katherine Gibbs put their best foot forward as they spoke to the girls hoping to gain applicants for their respective schools.

Unfortunately, the regularly scheduled meetings held throughout the year were few because of more attractive activities like rock bands and pie eating contests. However, despite the erosion in attendance the girls managed a field trip that took them through Mass Bay and Aquinas where the club got an up-close look at the facilities and activities of an in-action school.

Perhaps the most exhaustive and exhausting field trip was a top-to-bottom tour of the older John Hancock Building. The tour was productive in more ways than one. Not only did the girls see the "busy-as-bees" workers honey-combing the hive; they tasted some of the honey: lunch was on the company and two girls on the tour signed on as employees.

The climax of the year's activities for all groups at Walpole High is the banquet that makes it all worthwhile. For the business club it was a night of splendor at the Chateau de Ville in Randolph where the group enjoyed a delicious meal and a play "Come Blow Your Horn."

Pedalling: Right On

The bicycle club, led by Mr. Jim Higgins, did not have as active a year as many had originally hoped they would have. In the fall there were a number of organized rides after school. This same thing was attempted in the spring, but because of the weather and people's schedules, it did not work out.

A weekend trip to Martha's Vineyard was discussed, but there was not enough interest to make the trip a reality. In the fall, club members hope that there will be more interest in the club and a weekend cycle trip may be organized.

Although the club was not that active, the members at many times provided a sounding board for individuals who organized their own rather lengthy cycle trips.

Climbing Through New Worlds

Loon is: standing up when you know you're going to fall; thirty dollars; being wet, cold, hot, tired, refreshed; plunging your face deep into a cool mountain stream and gulping clean fresh water into your parched throat; rappeling down a mountain as the last rays of sun shoot over the summit; canoeing 25 miles through rapids including spills; trudging one mile through deep, powdered snow to the summit of a peak; snowshoeing four miles out of the woods in the dark; rockclimbing; iceclimbing; running the loon marathon, circuits, munching baneck, as well as shricks, (one like sponges, the other like bricks); keeping a journal, being petrified of the ropes course; spending three peaceful days on an island without the sound of another voice; discovering yourself and other people.

For the thirty-two students who experienced Loon Project this fall as well as the nineteen who enjoyed Winter Loon this winter, it meant becoming better acquainted with nature: smelling it, seeing it, feeling it, tasting it, loving it, and sometimes even disliking it; but all finished with a deeper respect for the world around them and the world within them.

The Student Advisory Council To The School Committee

This year's Student Advisory Council was very active under the support and encouragement of Superintendent Dr. John MacDonald. A major objective was established by the council: to provide a successful link between the student body and the School Committee.

The council was involved in two major projects this year. First, they attempted to instruct students about the Drug Policy by distributing and posting copies of the policy. A follow-up questionnaire found the majority of students aware of the policy and many eager to learn more about it.

The second project was to work with the School Committee in determining the future of Walpole High School. The council visited local comprehensive high schools, ran an open house for RTM members, and compiled a statement of student and faculty opinions which was read at the Town Meeting.

All in all, it was a satisfying and productive year for the members of the Student Advisory Council.

Math, Chess, Debate: The Mind Benders

Chess

For the first time in several years Walpole High School was represented by a chess team in organized league competition. The team, although sometimes desperate for players, made great strides with the encouragement of their advisor, Mr. Coviello.

The members of the team included Seniors: John O'Leary, Mike Roebber, Arthur Pellissier, Paul Knoble, Ron Pellowe; Juniors: Brian Sullivan, Tom Brobjer, Dan Benedetti; Sophomores: Tony Franciosa, Mark Peach, and Ed Bocock. John O'Leary, Brian Sullivan, and Mike Roebber were the principal players while the other members played the remaining two boards (there are five boards in organized league competition).

While this year's record of 1 win—9 losses does not reflect the growth of individual members, it is expected that the added experience for these neophytes will contribute to future successes.

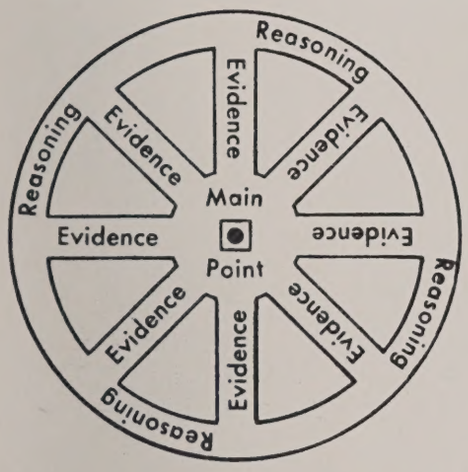
Debate Team Accepts The Challenge



This year the debate team had an unfortunate average of one win in every six rounds of debate. However, this was still a big step forward since the school didn't even have a team last year. There were four regular debaters: Patrice Lamperti, Phillip Johnson, Donna Boucher and Albert Abramson.

The team's coach Mr. T. Hubbard plans on teaching debate again next year with the prospect of a larger and more active club that will boost the win column of the team's record. Because the art of debating will be included in the curriculum next year as part of a course which Mr. Hubbard teaches, he is hopeful that involved upperclassmen as well as incoming sophomores will provide a solid nucleus on which to build for upcoming competition.

The issue that the team will tackle next year will be "Election Reform." The pro's and con's of the method of selecting a president and vice-president will be the comtemporary problem that will occupy not only the team's but the country's attention as well.

A Christmas Bear Story

By ... ED MOTT

If you are ever at this time of year up on the Old Pennichuck Hill down at the Boardman farm, select any one of the grizzled woodmen who will find already sitting there, exchange a time at pot luck, refrigerate for a certain liquid that is popular with the natives and in return coax and tease and refer laughingly to Old Beelzebub, the remarkable bear of Spook Run gully and the amazing Christmas present he made to one Isiah Simms.

As the story goes, the oldest settlement in all that part of the original wilderness was at Pennichuck. The deep gully and the creek that roared through it were there when the first settlers came. Neither had any name, and it was not until folks began to see ghosts along the creek and in the gully that appropriate nomenclature for them was suggested. Silas Grubb, so they will tell you, shot a deer one day. It fell, and he stepped up to it to cut its throat. As he was standing astride the deer he supposed was dead it rose suddenly and went bounding down the creek, with Silas on its back, clasping its neck and vociferating loudly that help would be welcome. Bay State Champs

HE MADE THE WILD PLUNGE.

Since the morning of the first day when Coach Lee's squad stepped on the field of football camp in August, 'til the final gun on Thanksgiving Day, the Rebels worked hard and never gave up and it paid off as they won the Bay State League title. Things looked dim for a while when they were upset by Needham (12-0) and were tied by Natick (6-6) but the team, led by co-captains Tony Farretta and Steve Luongo, bounced back to finish up strong and defeat Framingham North on Turkey Day for the championship, 26-13.

The offense, run by All-Star quarterback Jim Berluti, led the entire league in total points and total offense. The defensive unit was spearheaded by Tony Farretta and Glen Ford. The defense was the league's stingiest as they allowed only a total of 52 points.

It was a tough year for the varsity with the 2-4-2 season — an uphill struggle all the way. The climb was given a boost by hot shot Mary Ann Collins who was brought up from the jv's. As center forward she scored the winning goal in her first game which was against Wellesley. One of the unsung heroes of that game was Jan McDavitt who gave an assist in a goal despite being clobbered on the head by a Wellesleyian Amazon's stick.

It was a different story for the unbeatable jv's who ended with a perfect season. That kind of performance projected a bright image in the crystal ball of 1974-75.

All Star Team

Although the lack of spectators was disappointing, Walpole's soccer team was outstanding this year. Their record of 10-5-1 was the best record Walpole has had in a long time. Another thing that distinguishes the 1974 team is the nomination of John Marrinucci to the All State All Star team.

Coached by Tom Morris, next year's team has a lot to look forward to. Even though they lost 13 seniors there are still 11 underclassmen who played varsity this year and hopefully will return next year to better their records.

The Rebel basketball team finished the season with only four wins and fourteen losses but their record doesn't show just how hard they played. There were some frustrating times, to say the least, but they never at any time gave up. The team, led by co-captains Bill Adami and Al Beetle, pulled out a big upset over Braintree in their first encounter in double overtime. John Norton came off the bench to sink a key basket to send the game into overtime and then with six seconds left in the second overtime period, All-Star center Bob Flieger sank two free throws to win the game.

Accident-Prone Team Limps Through Season

This season the girls set some new kind of record in the number of accidents suffered by team members: Ann Daniel broke her ankle while doing cartwheels in gym; Janet Finn pulled ligaments in her knee which she twisted during practice; Judy Driscoll had to wear shin splints to absorb some of the pressures absorbed in rebounding; Mary Ann Collins suffered bruised knees from diving for loose basketballs; Jean McCarthy was slowed down by an old skiing injury that kicked up during games. The only player to escape injury was Ann Clark who obviously led a charmed life on the courts.

On the bright side, Mary Ann Collins and Donna Pellini were the hot long distance shooters, while Janet Finn and Jean McCarthy were the spirited rebounders.

P.S. Despite the bleak season the team would appreciate all readers to note the narrow margin in each game lost: within five points.

Norwood Defeat Sparks Series of Wins

For the Walpole Rebels' 1973-74 hockey season the one bright spot came during their last six games when they won each game. The one true sad part was when Coach Cinto, who has brought two Massachusetts Schoolboy Hockey Championships to Walpole High, announced his retirement as head coach of the hockey team. This year's hockey team also sent two deserving players to the All Star game: Tom Pruell and Ed Stuber. Fittingly, Walpole's remarkable six-game winning streak started with the Rebels' biggest rival, Norwood, with a 3-2 win for Walpole at Four Seasons Arena.

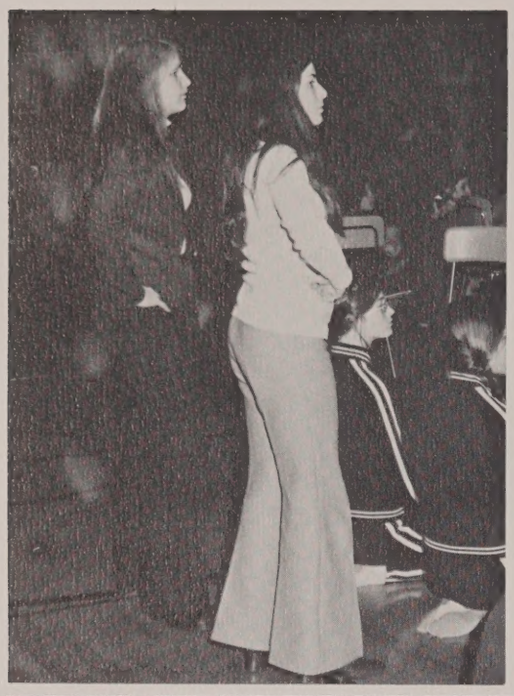
The High's And Low's Of The Gymnastic



Despite a high casulty list, the girls' gymnastic team enjoyed some brilliant, individual performances. The casualty list was a long one: Lisa Rossi sprained her ankle stepping from the low beam during practice; Ann Fallon chipped a finger during floor exercise; Bonnie McCaskill got a late start because of a cyst operation; Barbara Jankowski injured her back and was unable to compete in more than two or three meets.

For the highlights: Ann Fallon reached a high score of 7.0 on floor exercises out of a possible 10. It was her best performance of the season; Karen Peckham had a flawless routine on the uneven parallel bars in a meet against Norwood. The 2-10 season, though a disappointment, spotlighted many outstanding individual efforts.

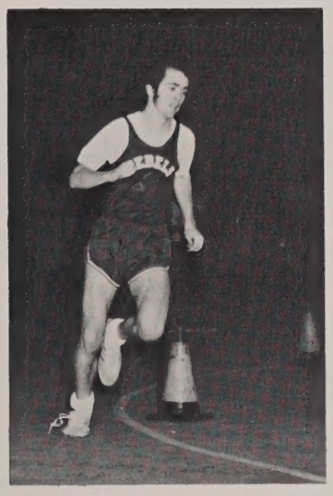
Winter Track Has Perfect Season — 0-9

Start of the 600.

The Winter Indoor Track team finished a dismal season losing to Framingham North by a score of 68 to 17. The loss was typical of the meets that the Rebels competed in this year at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston. The final record was 0 wins, 9 losses.

Most of the losses were by a large margin. The meet which the Rebels came closest to winning was against Wellesley (50-36). The defeats were due not so much to lack of talent but to lack of team members. In many of the events there was only one Rebel entered; this automatically gave the opponents two of the three finishing places.

Two standouts on the team were Mike Valerio in the 50-yard dash and Mark Higgins in the 45-yard hurdles. Both finished first and second respectively in most of their events. Valerio competed in the Eastern Massachusetts finals, held in Reading.



Last but not least Mark Ellis finishes the 600 all unstrung.

B. Gallagher leads the field in the 1000 yard run.

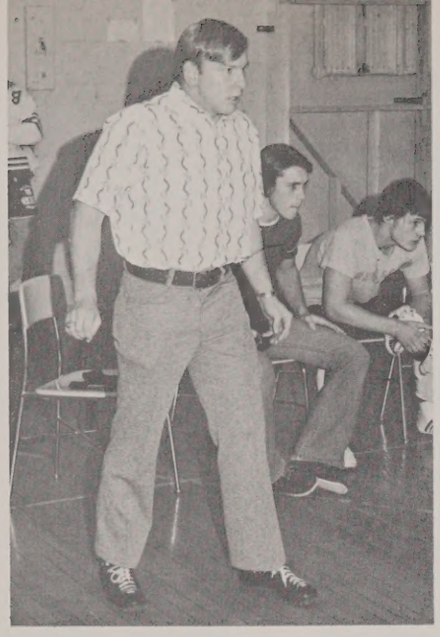
Victory Hard



To Pin Down

Statistics may be misleading and this year's wrestling record was a perfect example. The Rebel grapplers finished the season with 9 wins and 5 losses, a respectable record for any team but it didn't reflect Walpole's true colors. With three starters injured in January, the team suffered a one point loss to Braintree and a two point loss to Norwood.

In the Regionals, the Rebels finished a strong fifth but if a couple of breaks had come Walpole's way they would have placed higher. Steve Tryon finished second in the 107 lb. class, Mike Richards was third at 121 lbs., and Paul Brennan placed fourth in the heavyweight division. Matt Gulla and Chopper Maxwell made it to the semi-finals but they both lost very close matches to the eventual champions in their weight classes. Since it was a double elimination tournament, Chopper and Matt got another chance but they both lost heartbreakers in overtime.

The team was led by some great performers in Matt Gulla (11-1-2), Chopper Maxwell (10-2-2), M. Richards (11-3), P. Brennan (10-4), S. Tryon (10-3), and Fran Ralli (10-3-1) who turned in some great victories.

After two seasons of drought, the ski team was finally blessed with a little snow this year. It competed in seven regular league races. Some of the team also competed in the Paul Revere Cup Race, an annual 13 kilometer event. In cross country events the team finished a strong second in the final league standings. The team won one race and placed second in the other two races. Captains Deanne Smeltzer and Kingston DeRosa led the strong cross country attack. Deanne placed second in two meets and Kingston placed first and second in two of the meets.

In final individual standings in cross country in the league, Walpole had three girls and three boys in the top ten. Deanne Smeltzer, Eileen White, and Lorraine Gray placed 5th, 6th, and 8th respectively. Kingston DeRosa, David Goodwin, and Jack Barranger placed 2nd, 6th, and 7th respectively. In slalom events the team was led by Jack Barranger who placed in the top ten in individual standings in that category also. Jack's strong showing in both events enabled him to place in the top five individual skiers in the league in the final combined standings.

After a mild slump the first half of the season, the baseball team bounced back to capture fourth place in the Bay State League. The team did remarkably well in a league with some of the top teams in this area including Milton, who went on to win the Eastern Mass. baseball championship.

Captain Jim Smith and pitcher Chuck Jones led the team to a winning season and in the process were picked to play on the Bay State League All-Star team. Chuck, who finished with an 8-2 record, was one of the best players in the state and was drafted by the New York Yankees and will be pursuing a baseball career.

IN DEFENSE OF A SOFTBALL SLUMP

The girls' softball team had a substandard season in 1974, finishing with a 2-6 record in league competition. Poor defense marked the team's downfall time and time again, behind basically effective pitching by sophomore Cathy Groark. Offensively, Captain Janet Finn was the team's star, completing the season with a batting average over 500.

The junior varsity's 6-4 overall record bodes a better season in 1975, especially since four of the original starters were moved up to varsity as the season progressed.

Matchless Enthusiasm

MATCHLESS ENTHUSIASM

The best way to describe this year's tennis team is enthusiastic. While they did not win many matches, they did learn a good deal about the game of tennis and most of them are looking forward to next year.

A special thanks goes to Gene Peyton, who not only was the captain of the team, but also acted as assistant coach. His help was instrumental in the improvement of many of the younger players.

Girls' Tennis Moves Up A Notch

Though they weren't tops on the tournament totem pole the team moved from near-low man (woman) with wins over Norwood, Milton, and Natick. That topped last year's slump of one win.

Factors in the League climb were: Mary Alice Howard, an outstanding performer who, though a Sophomore, was the team's number one player. Other contributors were Seniors Ann Fallon and Judy Alexander. Ann played third singles; Judy, second doubles.

Runners Attempt Heartbreak Hill

Despite an 0-9 season, the Rebel track team showed a lot of spirit and never gave up. It was disheartening at times for the team competing against other schools with four times as many members.

In the Bay State League Conference Meet, the Rebels managed to finish 9th out of 10 teams, only 1-1/2 points behind 8th place Dedham. Phil Bergamo captured 3rd in the javelin while Mark Higgins placed 4th in the 180 low hurdles and 3rd in the 120 high hurdles.

With a lot of experienced juniors and sophomores coming back next year along with the freshmen from the junior highs, the future looks promising.

Janice Connolly hurdles all obstacles for another win.

Rebelles: Small But

Despite their usual lack of numbers, the Rebelles had an enthusiastic rebuilding year. A new coach, new uniforms, and the addition of the 80-yard hurdles made for an exciting season. Three school records were set; Janice Connolly (sophomore) – initial school record of 12.5 seconds in the 80-yard hurdles, Debbie McSweeney (sophomore) – high jump record of 4 feet 7 inches (broke Martha Kiesling & Carolyn Reed's record of 4 feet 5 inches) and 880 Medley Relay Team (Martha Kiesling, Holly Fahringer, Janice Connolly, and Irene Mackun) 2 minutes 11 seconds (broke record of 2 minutes 12 seconds established earlier in season), and the entire team worked hard so that by the end of the season each girl felt a sense of accomplishment. With all but two girls returning next year, the Rebelles can certainly look for a winning season in '75.

Second To Braintree

The golf team had a fine season finishing second to Braintree with a 6-2-1 record in the Bay State League. They opened the season by losing a heartbreaker against Norwood. The tough Wellesley match was won on the last putt on the last hole by Joe Oram. Oram made his putt and Randy Billingham achieved a tie against his female opponent to win 5-4. They tied Needham. Jim Barker tied his match by winning the last two holes which gained the tie.

The highlights of the season were Jim Barker's eagle (2 under par on a single hole) against Framingham South at Framingham and Steve Pidegon's 2 over par 37 against Framingham North at Walpole.

The golf team will be playing on the new Walpole Country Club next year. They have played 3 or 4 years on the present Country Club. There will be 18 holes on the new course as opposed to 9 holes on the old course. The new course will be much harder with more woods, traps, and ponds.

There will be five returning lettermen next year: Joe Murphy, Jim Brown, Joe Oram, Jim Barker, and next year's captain, Steve Pidgeon.

AUTUMN QUEEN

Coach Lee, Prince Charming

On Thursday, November 2, the annual Autumn Queen Dance was held in the main gym. The band Broken-Arrow provided the music.

Other than providing an opportunity for a festive evening out, the dance gave the students a chance to pick Miss Walpole High – the Autumn Queen.

Qualifications for candidates seemed somewhat obscure, and seemed to vary, depending on the species of the voter (the girls looked for loyalty, the boys for beauty.) Be that as it may, five rather than the traditional four emerged as candidates: Ruth Karmelin, Ann Clarke, Ginny Harwood, Linda Townsend, and Paula Magnuson.

Paula swept the regal crown and Coach Lee escorted Paula across the floor in a smooth dance step designed for the Rebels' next offensive play.

R. Livanchey, M. Stacy, G. Peyton, C. Young.

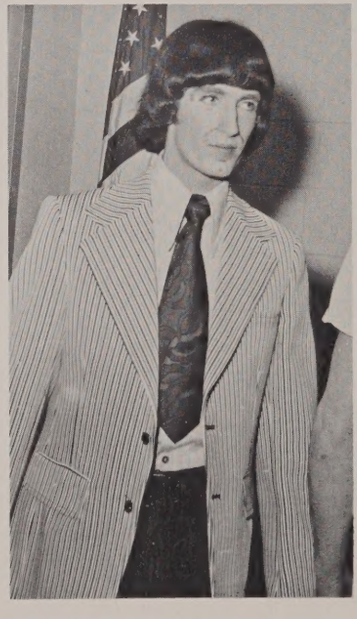
Web Of Murder Becomes A Night

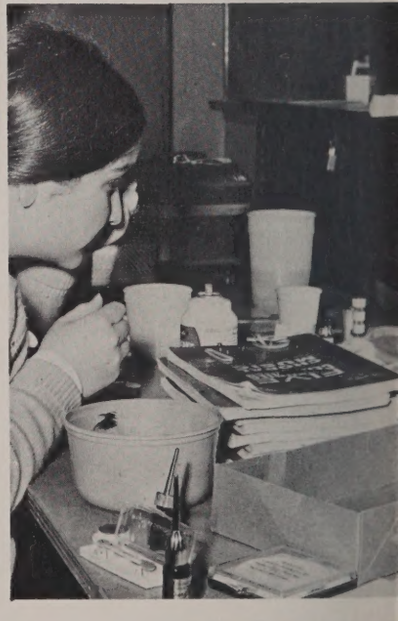
Karen "Belle" Peckham prepares for showtime. David Allan had not yet arrived as the auditorium began to fill with people despite near "torrential" rains.

Deanne Smeltzer (Malicious Minerva) gazes up at her late husband at the end of Act I.

Pre-show time jitters, as the cast frantically rehearses in an effort to pull off the production. Vickie, Mr. MacDonald, Doug Sprague, Deanne and Jimmy.

Jim Berluti (Keith Latimer) photographer asks, "You mean I got to wear all this makeup? . . ." Better than Broadway, Mr. Mills music room became a back stage dressing/make-up room as Stephanie (Sue Benziger) begins to liberally apply hers.





Barbara Griglak, Doug Sprague, V. Carr, Jim Berluti and Karen Peckham hover over Deanne as the mystery deepens with Minerva's apparent death.

Karen "Belle" Peckham and David "Pete" Allan mirror some of the surprise of the audience as the play takes a twist when a book case (that isn't really a book case) begins revolving and a series of "corpus delecties" begin appearing.

To Remember

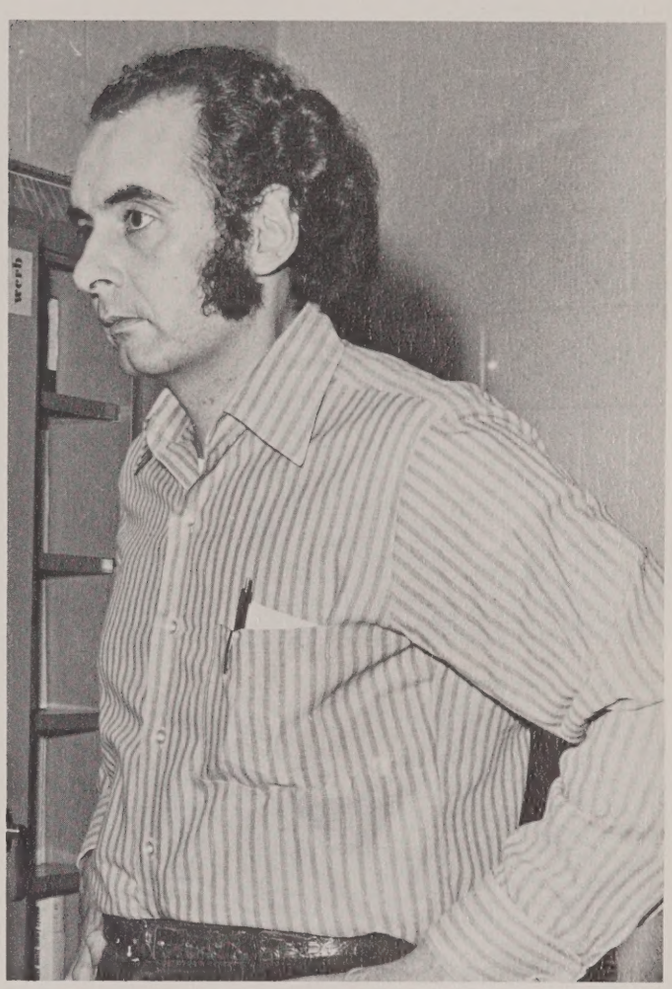
Unfortunately Eileen was only able to take part in the Friday evening performance. Vickie Carr, her prompter, filled in for her on Saturday doing a very admirable job.

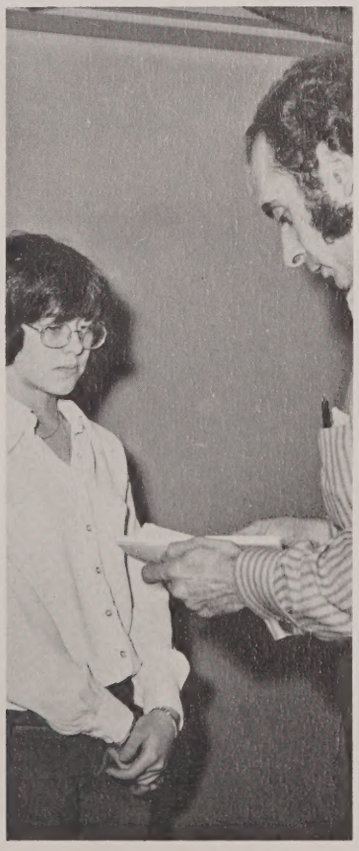
The intrigue, suspense, and murder on stage was nothing in comparison to the sweat, blood, and tears shed behind the wings in the dark recesses of a "Web of Murder" presented March 15 and 16. Except for a few miscues on Friday evening, the principals carried their parts off well to a near-filled house. But then, Saturday arrived and the plot thickened.

At 4:00 p.m. on that day, just four hours before the opening curtain, Vickie Carr received a phone call: "Eileen Reis has been in an automobile accident and we want you to take her place." Dazed but game, Vickie met with the cast in the auditorium for a quick mini-rehearsal.

At 8:00 p.m. Vickie and the rest of the cast were ready to go. But alas and alack another fly in the web — Dave Allen (Pete Martinello) was still missing. 8:01-02-03-05! and the missing body arrived on the scene — breathless but well.

At 8:20 the curtain went up on "A Web of Murder" but that first scene was really an anti-climax as far as the cast was concerned. It was a night to remember.





Mr. MacDonald gives some quick instructions to Cathy Connors, make up girl converted to prompter in an emergency situation. She spent a comfortable evening on the floor on stage behind Minerva's couch supplying forgotten lines to Vickie.

Mr. MacDonald puts it all together under the pressure of last-minute plans that nearly kept the second night curtain from going up.

Mr. Burke, overseer of the prom.

D. Smeltzer (Prom Queen) and J. Berluti.

PROM QUEEN CANDIDATES: J. MacDonald, L. Townsend, D. Smeltzer, J. DeCristafaro, C. MacIntire.

"Colour

It was a special "night on the town" for all who attended the 1974 Junior Prom with "Colour My World" as its theme. The prom was held at the elegant Chateau de Ville in Framingham on Friday, May third. Just walking in the doors and seeing flowing fountains and magnificent chandeliers, assured everyone of a memorable evening.

The night began with a delicious roast beef dinner topped by tea cakes and ice cream pie. Though there was little space for elbow room on the dance floor, no one seemed to mind as the orchestra played such tunes as the "Hully Gully" and "Greek Snake Dance" in which everyone took part. No one seemed to mind whose feet they stepped on just as long as the music kept coming.

The receiving line was double the size of last year's but was handled quite smoothly by our handsome ushers.

To top the evening was the selection of the Prom Queen and her court. Deanne Smeltzer made a beautiful queen with her court consisting of Joanne DeCristafaro, Carol MacIntire, Joan McDonald, and Linda Townsend.

When midnight came, everyone agreed that this night had put a little "colour in their world."

Michael Richard, Paul Brennan, Jim Berluti, Tony Farretta, and Pat Nee enjoy the wide open road on Class of '74 trip.

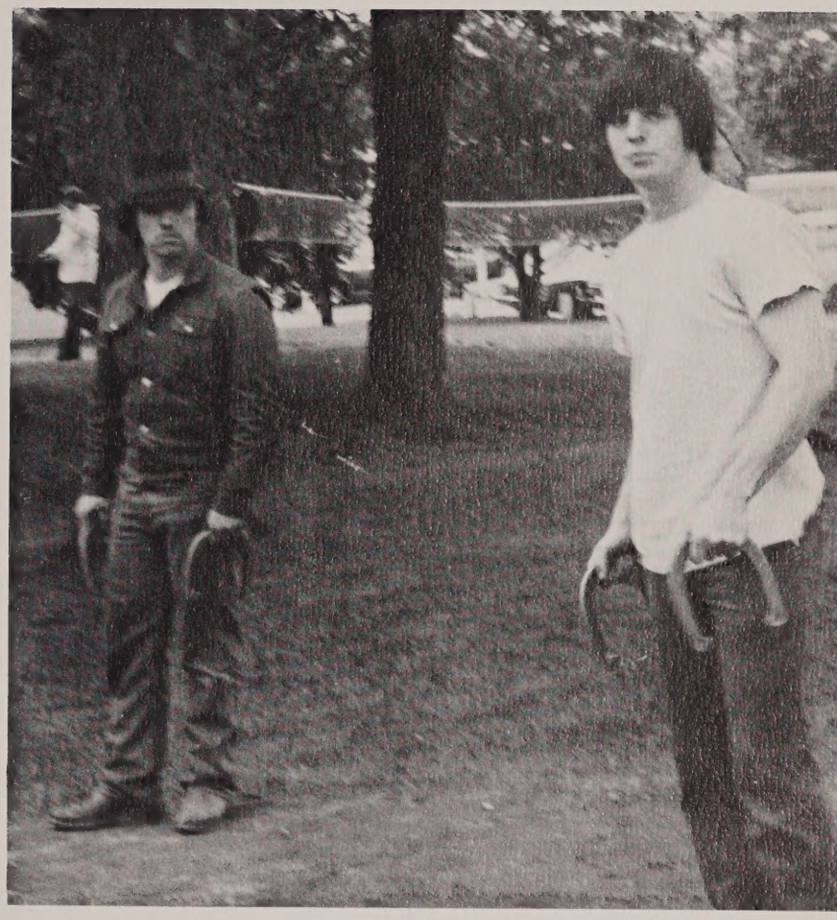
New Lives Begin?

Despite the rather ominous start (one of the buses broke down) the Class of '74's caravan of cheering graduates (?) finally arrived at the mecca for vacationing seniors — Frank Davis' pleasureland in Moodus, Connecticut.

It was a fun-filled day for the whole crowd as they indulged themselves in a variety of individual and team competitions. The two most popular events (eating aside) were baseball and boating. Both the boys' and girls' teams were victors over the opponents from other schools who were sharing the grounds with them. In the afternoon the fellas and girls mixed it up in a coed baseball game.

Although WHS did well on land they did not fare well on the waves. Led by the canoe team's captain, Bernie Brady, Walpole lost when their canoe capsized.

The day concluded with a dance and a final "All aboard" as tired but happy seniors boarded buses and settled back to dream of mortar boards and tassels and the validity of their motto: "Old Ways End and New Lives Begin."



Fran Ralli was almost as good at horse-shoes as he was at wrestling.

It's tough learning to adjust to no bells.

It was hard to stay bored.

Old Ways End?

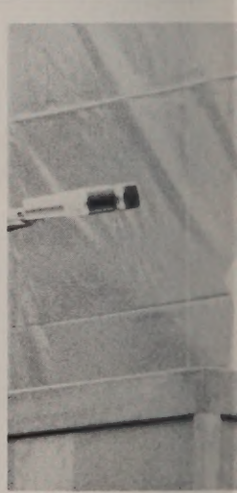
Tolerance for the final assembly.

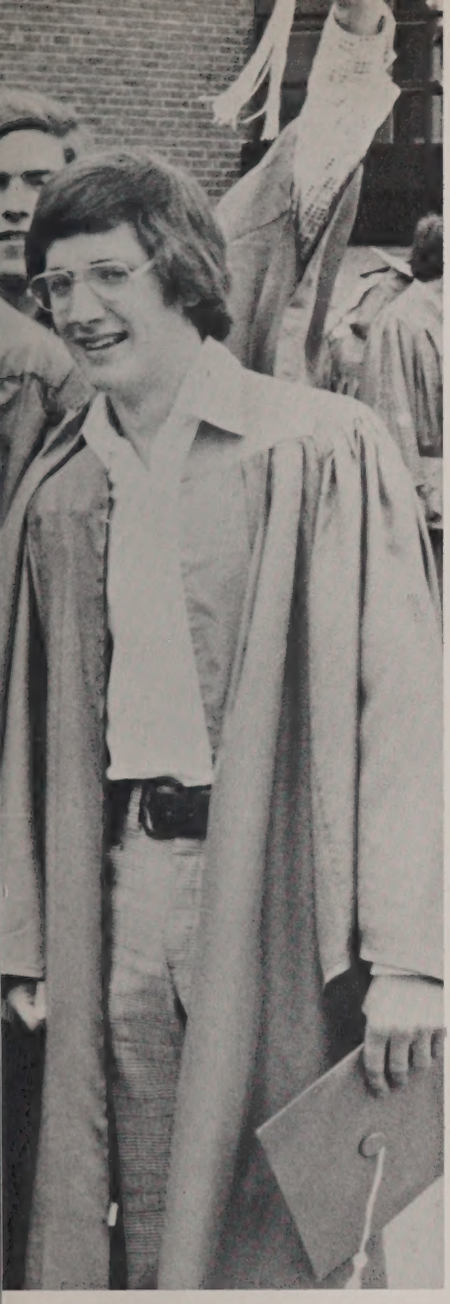
Introduction, Debbie Hoey

Responsibility to Family, Julie Rockwood

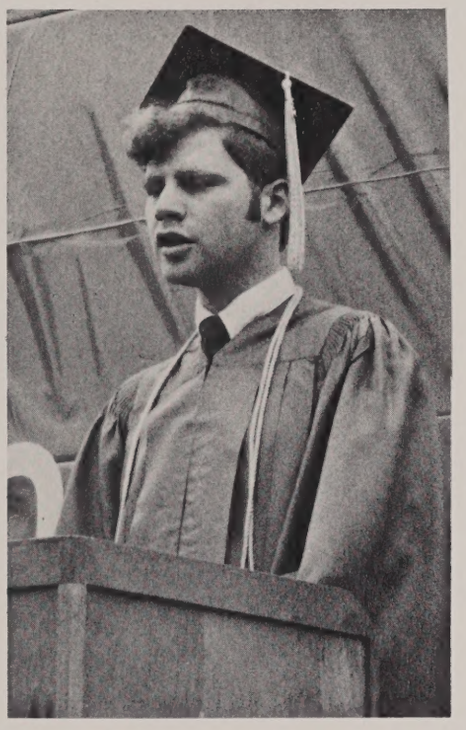
New Responsibility to Society, Ken Tucker

Responsibility to Self, Earl Varney.





Old Ways End & New Lives Begin



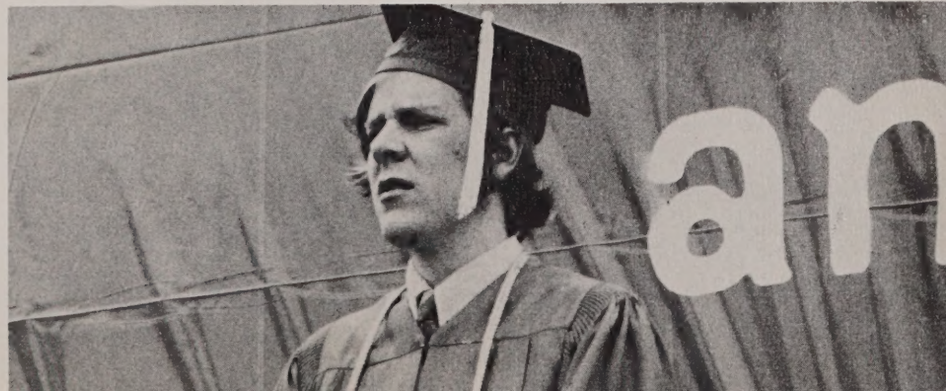
A pass to open doors.

Despite the dark clouds that hovered onimously over Turco field on Saturday, June 2, the 100th graduating class enjoyed their premiere performance of a much-rehearsed final act. No one in the all star cast dropped a single line.

Student essays quite thoroughly covered student responsibility toward society, family, and self. The fidgeting, yawning graduates and audience suddenly revived when Mr. Stacy rose to hand out the coveted diplomas.

His parting words reminded the students of three important attitudes that would help them maintain a healthy perspective in life: (1) Define a goal and determine by every means to achieve it (2) Choose an occupation or profession that will satisfy personal, individual needs (3) Develop a sense of humor (the surest way to avoid or cure the inevitable ulcer). (Between points one and two a school bell came ringing loud and clear across the field). "You won't have to listen to that any more," Mr. Stacy quipped. The class of '74 responded with a spontaneous round of applause.

The whole program went off like a well calibrated Swiss watch with one exception: The loosened skin on drum "bonniged" when Mike Hanson was called to receive his diploma. It was the only dissonant beat of the afternoon.



So it's the laughter we will remember

Whenever we remember . . .

The way we were

A Note to Hippies & Flower People

"We have reached an age, those of us to whom fortune has assigned a post in life's struggle, when, beaten and smashed and biffed by the lashings of the dragon's tail, we begin to appreciate that the old man was not such a damned fool after all. We saw our parents wrestling with that same dragon, and we thought, though we never spoke the thought aloud, 'Why don't he hit him on the head?' Alas, comrades, we know now. We have hit the dragon on the head and we have seen the dragon smile."

—Ernest Lawrence Thayer, Harvard '85 at his class's tenth reunion

DRAWN FOR AMERICAN HERITAGE BY GERRY GERSTEN

THE NEW 1908 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

THE NEW "MOTIOGRAPH" MOTION PICTURE MACHINE is the greatest machine ever made for 5-cent theater work. The "Motiograph" is the most powerful, the most strongly and substantially constructed motion picture machine on the market. It is a machine that will stand the hard wear and tear of continuous service that is demanded in 5-cent theater work. In the sharpness and clearness of the pictures, freedom from flicker, ease and convenience of operation, strength and durability, it surpasses any machine yet constructed. It is made with fireproof magazines, and automatic asbestos fire shutter. It complies with all fire ordinances and all rules of the board of underwriters. It is the latest, most practical, and the best motion picture machine made, not only for 5-cent theatre work, which is the hardest test to which a motion picture machine can be put, but for any class of moving picture work. For complete description, full specifications, and prices, send for our big special catalogue of stereopticons and motion picture apparatus which will be mailed to you free of charge.

THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS has grown to immense proportions, developing into a world wide enterprise, involving an invested capital of millions of dollars. Like the advent of the telephone or the graphophone, the moving picture machine was at first regarded as more or less of a curiosity, but when the possibilities of this new field became better known it grew more and more into favor with the public and recently sprung into such popular favor that there is scarcely a city of any size in this country which does not contain a moving picture theater with an ever increasing number of regular patrons.

TRAVELING EXHIBITION WORK is today more popular than ever. An excellent plan is to map out a route which will take about a year to cover, arranging your bookings several weeks or months in advance. Your advertising matter is sent on in advance so that when you reach each city you have only to give your exhibition, collect the receipts for the evening, and then pass to the next city. When you have finished your route, it will then be time to start and go over the same ground again with a new lecture and, if your first exhibition has been one to deserve appreciation, you will rapidly develop a steady patronage which will be worth many dollars to you in future years.

STREET ADVERTISING is a comparatively new but extremely interesting branch of exhibition work. For this business it is only necessary to have a good stereopticon outfit, such as those described in our special catalogue of these goods. You will also require a number of stereopticon views and a considerable quantity of attractive advertising slides. You then arrange with the merchants of your city to show their advertisements for a certain amount each night, and by stretching a screen upon the side of a building and placing your machine across the street, you can project your views and slides upon the screen. The novelty of this exhibition will attract many people, and you will be surprised to find how many will stop and remain for hours to watch these pictures. The merchants also feel the effects in increased business. This work can be done in your own city during the evening, as it does not in any way require all of your time.

CHURCHES, LODGES, AND SCHOOLS. Many of the largest churches are now using the stereopticon and find that it not only increases their attendance but creates a real interest in the subject of the day. Various organizations of the church will find the stereopticon a most profitable matter for their consideration. Lodge work is made far more interesting by the use of the stereopticon, and we furnish any secret society slides needed, a list of which is given in our special stereopticon catalogue. Schools and colleges are installing the stereopticon in many of their lecture rooms with most excellent results. These features and many other valuable and important facts regarding the stereopticon and moving picture business are fully described in our big 160-page Special Catalogue, which will be sent free, to any address, upon request.

THE 5-CENT THEATER IS HERE TO STAY. It fills a want that has existed in every community for a moderate priced form of clean, up to date amusement. This business offers attractive inducements to anyone with small capital who wishes to establish himself in a profitable and permanent business of his own. Almost any vacant store room can be made into a five-cent theater by removing the glass front and replacing it with a regular theater front similar to the illustration shown on this page. A show of about twenty minutes is given, and the low price of admission is an inducement which many people cannot resist.

SEND FOR OUR BIG 160-PAGE FREE CATALOGUE OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.

THIS IS THE LARGEST CATALOGUE of moving picture machines, stereopticons and exhibition supplies that has ever been published. This big catalogue fully illustrates and describes all of the apparatus used in public exhibition work, such as moving picture machines, stereopticons, gas making outfits, illustrated songs, moving picture film, etc., etc. It shows exactly what is needed for a complete outfit, tells how to select the best machine, gives valuable hints and suggestions for the beginner, and will prove an invaluable guide to anyone who is interested in exhibition work of any kind.

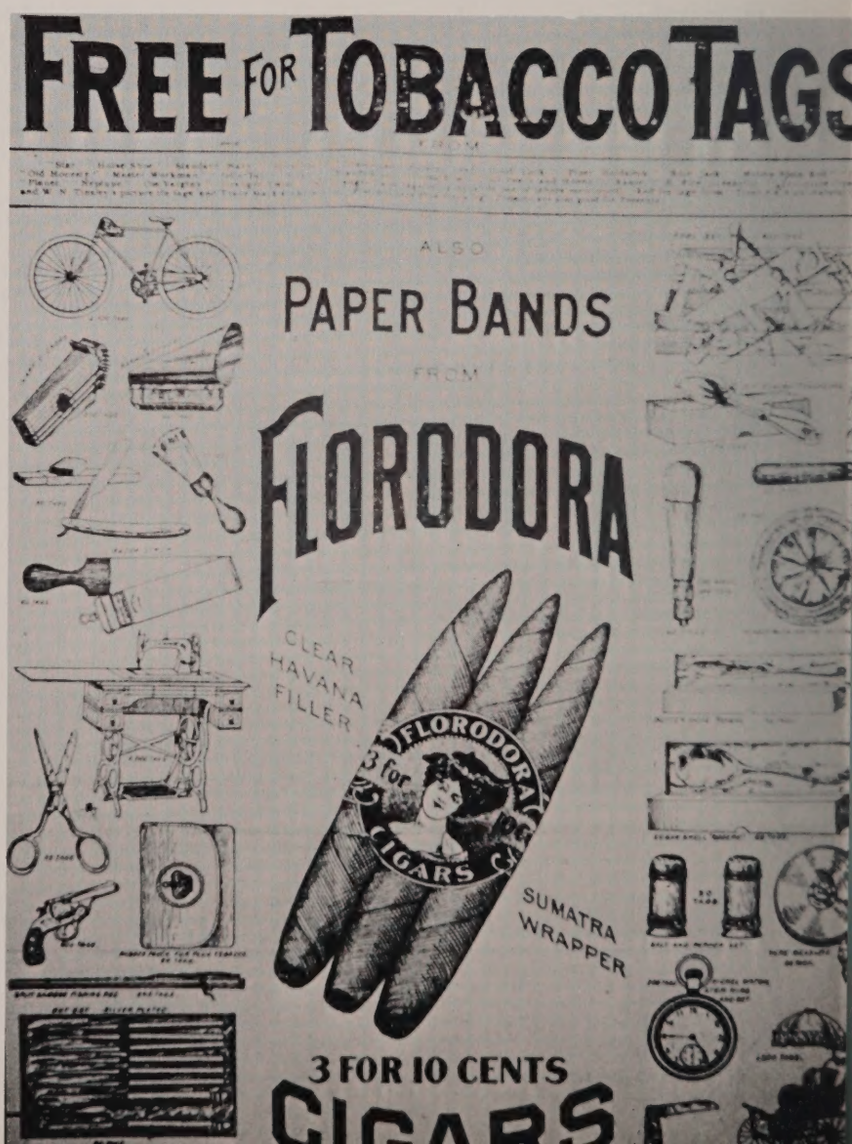
NOTES



The Pontiac Six is scoring the most spectacular first year success ever recorded in automotive history—because it meets the driving conditions of today like no other car in the world at its price.

Without an excess ounce of bulk—without an unnecessary inch in length, it is ideally suited to the congested highways of today. Having the largest engine of any six costing less than $1,000, it flashes swiftly through congested traffic, and so sturdily is it constructed that it can be held at top speed for as many continuous hours as the driver likes.

Yet despite its highly desirable external compactness, the Pontiac Six is a supremely comfortable car. Step into the Pontiac Six Sedan. Note its roominess. Mark well the wide, inviting seats and ample leg room.

Then remember, that with all its luxurious provisions for comfort, the Pontiac Six turns in a 38 foot circle—and that it can be quickly and easily parked in places too small for other cars of equal passenger capacity.

Oakland Six, Companion to Pontiac Six, $1023 to $1295. All prices at factory. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

That unmistakable charm about a home amid New England's hills

WHAT is the secret of the charm of a New England home? Not expensive furnishings, certainly, nor acquiescence to every new whim that fashion dictates.

No, it goes deeper than that. These New England women—and they have a reputation as good housekeepers to uphold—know how to rearrange, redecorate, to refurnish; to make evident the beauty of old furniture, draperies, rugs.

if you are going into Boston to shop, it's only the Globe that you will find the most complete store news.

OUR FIVE-MAGNET BRIDGING TELEPHONES are built for use on lines with from three to forty instruments installed, and are equally suited to smaller lines. They are equipped with our extra powerful five-magnet generator, tested and guaranteed to ring through 125,000 ohms resistance, to test and guaranteed to ring through 100 telephones on the same line. more power than is ever required in actual practice. If you are building a new line, no matter how many telephones are to be installed, we advise the purchase of our powerful five-magnet 1,000-ohm, compact, or 2,000-ohm long western style bridging telephone, as this equipment is standardized throughout the country. If you are adding telephones to a line already equipped, then it will be best to select instruments equipped with generators and ringers to match those already on the line. Prices on our bridging telephones, with both four and five-magnet generators and ringers of 1,000, 1,600 or 2,000 ohms resistance will be found at the bottom of this and the following page.

Marceau E Flat Bass.
11½-inch Bell.
We wish to call your attention particularly to this instrument and will say without fear of contradiction, that it has never been equaled, price considered. It has a deep, rich tone and furnishes an excellent fundamental bass for any brass band. It has enough volume to answer for a large instrumentation and the tone is full and sweet enough for use, if desired, in orchestras. The model is fine and the tubing is so thoroughly braced and reinforced that it will not break down under severe use. The valves are all quick and responsive and we guarantee the instrument to be satisfactory in every particular.

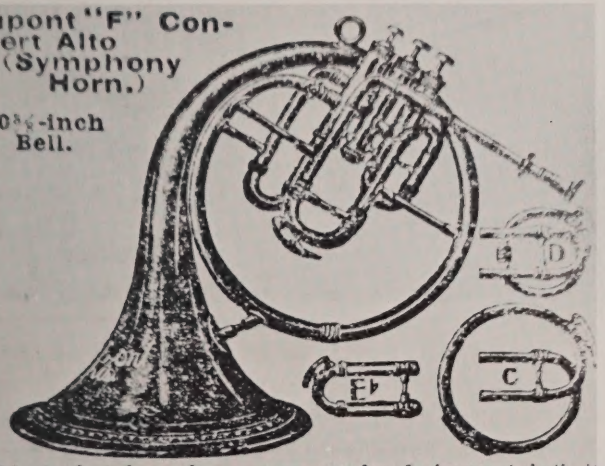
Dupont "F" Concert Alto (Symphony Horn.)

10¾-inch Bell.



This is fast becoming a very popular instrument, both in bands and orchestras. It adds a dash of color to the harmony in band music, which can be obtained in no other way, and is fast supplanting the regular upright alto as an accompaniment horn. In orchestra it is considered valuable because it does not require the constant practice which is required on the French horn, and its tone is every bit as mellow and sweet. Anyone who has learned to play a cornet or alto can play this instrument, because it fingers exactly the same as a cornet and blows exactly the same as the alto. It is furnished in the key of F, with C, E flat and D crook. Every crook is furnished with water key, permitting the removal of saliva, without the trouble and inconvenience of removing the crooks. This improvement is not to be found on any other make. When used in a band it is always played in E flat, and when used in the orchestra, the F and D crooks are used. The C crook is very useful, as it throws the instrument into a key which enables the performer to play right along with the piano or organ without transposing the music. It is the beautiful French horn model and is furnished complete, with music rack, mouthpiece and instruction book. We especially recommend this instrument and we know it will prove acceptable to all band and orchestra men who use it. $24.95
